for a "boom". Already have several cover the abundant foundation for a rich and populous country that exists in this it. immediate vicinity. Men of influence and prominence can accomplish a wonderful amount of good or evil by a very few words of commendation or condemnation among their associates and friends. The assurance of a good speculative opportunity in a newly awakening country possesses an infatuation that but few men can resist, and the invasion of this valley by a few representative gentlemen of Kansas City will surely be followed by the arrival of many others, who will display here such energy and sagacity as they built up that great city with. Our own citizens should encourage the coming of this class of people and seek to make their interests allied to our own. They are the leaven necessary for our are of equally quick growth and are far growth and prosperity and of which we certainly stand in great need.

A New Mexico correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat treats of "the chara of Irrigation" in a logical and charm in controling the precious element elements for all time, and it seems like the achievement of a new power to be able to disregard the clouds and the storm in producing a flood by the simple lifting of a water-gate. The want of a timely rain is ruin to the crops of the eastern farmer, while the irrigation so times the flood of water that it is given to the plants at the exact moment it is wanted and in just the volume required. That better crops are produced under such favorable circumstances, seems rational, but in this country where artificial irrigation is an absolute necessity the soil and climate favor a multiplicity "charm" of irrigation, therefore, posses- gest display of fosails. ses a double significance—that of superior indifference to the rainfall, and that of sure and abundant profits to the agriculturist and horti culturist,

THERE is a disposition on the part of all the producing mines of Pinal county to further increase their facilities for operating either mines or mills. The Silver King mill is receiving one large engine and boiler in place of its two separate sources of power, and many other improvements of an economical nature are being arranged. The Mammoth is preparing to add greater crushing capacity; the Tortilita expects to increase its milling facilities, and the Southern Belle is negotiating for adjacent properties with a view to enlargement. The Reymert mill is also nearly ready to begin been a time in the mining history of Pinal county that the outlook for bullion output was better.

lations with public and private corporations, to take a quiet and unostentatious journey to the north of the St. Lawrence, seems to be an increasing mania. Hardly a day passes that the telegraph does not bring the news of the unaccountable with the scarcely necessary supposition that he "akipped for Canada". As a rule they take but little boodle in their flight, for it is generally lost in speculation before their peculations come to light and they seek immunity from punishment in flight. In the course of time Canada will become a penal colony for our voluntary exiles, who will grow up a boodle aristocracy that may yet be the admiration of all the Chicago and New York aldermen.

Russia and Turkey now purpose placing General Einroth in as Provisional Governor until a ruler can be legally elected that will be acceptable in the eyes of the jealous monarchs of Europe.

The character of these gatherings should be changed or abolished.

THE St Louis Globe-Democrat pubishes a long interview with Michael J. Power, a mining expert of the Pacific coast and Sonora. The tale told is a marvelous lie which would do credit to the imaginative genius of Eli Perkins or Tom Ochiltree. Mike Power is well known in Arizona-very well known. The unfortunate accident that befell General Miles will necessarily postpone the presentation of the gold sword that was to take place next Monday, and it will be difficult to set a time when the presentation will take place. The postponement will detract from the enthusiasm that had been worked up and the occasion will be robbed of much of its spirit and attraction.

THE cottonwood trees that have given shade to the people of Florence for many years, are doomed to a speedy extinction. They are neither handsome nor desirable, and at times they are decidedly obnoxious. The ash and umbrella trees more desirable, while many other varieties of ornamental trees are easily grown.

The Charm of Irrigation.

There is a great charm about irrigation. As he sees the ditches tapped and the water spread over square after square of the vineyard, the aifalfa field, or the onion beds, the visitor's thoughts will work, while the Vekol keeps busy to its involuntarity go back to other scenes or full capacity, turning out an immense fields dependent upon the rain supply. successive seasons in which he had rainfall distributed just right for his crops? The remedy was at hand. Water was turned on and the tines upon which the insects had made their appearance were shaken. That was the end of the pest.

THE DISTANT PAST. Gossippy Recollections Showing That Ours Is Still a Very Young Nation.

"We think of the time of Washington as ages," said an elderly gentleman of antiquarian tastes, "and yet I can point to many illustrations which will suggest how very near the distant past is to us. after all. For instance, until within a few months a law partner of Aaron Burr was in active practice in this city. He had an office in the building that was torn down to make room for Temple court, and yet Burr came within a hair's breadth of being the third President of the United States. His tie vote with Jefferson threw the election into the House. Peter Cooper, who died not long ago, remembered the day of Washington's funeral. Daniel Webster was born while the revolution was in progress, and there are many men still in their prime in New York who have seen and heard him, and if I am not mistaken both Mr. Field and Mr. Evarts have been engaged in law cases in which Webster was also counsel. I recently met a hearty man of business just over the line in Connecticut who was chairman of the local committee appointed to receive Lafayette when he made his second visit to this country. This man's name is John Newman, and he remembers very well how Lafayette looked and what he said on that occasion. Henry Clay and John C. Calhoun were both lads before this Government was organized, but there is still living a man who sat in the United States Senate with them. I refer to ex-Senator Simon Cameron.

"There are receiving pensions to-day as widows of soldiers of the revolution seven women, and there were living at the time of the civil war five men who had fought during the revolution. I heard one of them, the Rev. Daniel Waldo, preach in 1881. Mr. Poore, the Washington correspondent, has told me that he has seen every President since Madison, and had snaken hands and spoken to every one since Monroe. An old friend of mine named Abijah Ressiqua, of Ridgefield, who died not long ago, had voted for every President since Madison, and he remembered very well hearing the church-bells toll on the day of Washington's funeral. There is in active business now a man who was two years old when Washington was first inaugurated President. He is George L. Perkins, of Norwich, and he was a man grown when he sailed down the Hudson on the famous trip that Robert Fulton once made from and to Albany with his steamboat. The engineer of the first locomotive that ever ran in the country was living some months ago, and I think still is.

"There is now living, and in good health, a famous man, who was a member of President Polk's Cabinet fortysix years ago. I mean Bancroft, the historian. Mr. Bancroft has met with very many men who took part in the revolutionary war and conversed with PINAL CONSOLIDATED MINING CO. them. Very many New Yorkers, not them. Very many New Yorkers, not yet old men, were well acquainted with the son of Alexander Hamilton, who died not long ago. Yet Alexander Hamilton was Washington's aid during the revolution and his first Secretary of the s the Treasury. You will see then from these illustrations, and I might give others, that we are still a very young Adler, Adolph, tr... 225 republic, and that but a few years have Adler, Adolph, tr... 225 Bason Martin tr. 750 passed since the time when all who now live might have taken the hands of men who had seen Washington and who had fought under him. Very many men now living have, in fact, been able to enjoy this privilege."-N. Y. Letter.

COUNSEL FOR THE SNAKE. How a Lawyer Refused the Request of a

The relations between counsel and client in England are conducted on cash basis. A barrister receives his fee when the brief which is to guide him in the trial of the case is handed to him. It was said of an able lawver who practiced at the New York bar fifty years ago, that he was always seized with a violent fit of coughing while a client was stating a case. If, however, the client dropped the retaining fee into the counsel's fidgety left hand, the spasm instantly subsided.

Lawyers sometimes resort to strange devices in order to avoid taking cases where the compensation offered is not as great as they think it should be. A San Francisco lawyer once found himself in a mining town, where his dissipation left him without money to pay his bills or to get away. One morning a man came to the landlord of the hotel where the lawyer was a guest and said he needed a first-rate lawver. The host said that a celebrated San Francisco lawyer was staying there, and showed the prospective client up-stairs to his room. The lawyer was still in bed, but he listened with pleasure to the man's story, thinking that a fat re tainer would set him again on his feet.

The case was this: A neighbor had a pet rattlesnake which had escaped from its cage and bitten the complainant's horse. The horse died in consequence of the bite. The owner wanted to prosecute for damages and desired to employ a first-class lawyer to bring

"How much, sir, was your horse worth?" asked the lawyer, wishing to name a fee which should be in proportion to the amount claimed.

"Five dollars," replied the man. "I am very sorry that I can't serve you," said the lawyer, "I am retained for the snake." and he turned over in the bed, a disgusted man. - Youth's

We always said we believed that those almond-eved heathen wrote the words for all our Easter hymns, and now we know it. Sleepling Alone.

It is very much healthier to sleep alone. The unhealthfulness of two persons occu-pying the same bed very much depends on the physical condition of either or both. If one is diseased, injury to the other is sure to result. The practice is unhealth-ful because the exhalations from the body of one come in contact with and are ab-sorbed by the skin of the other, and because each one must, of necessity, breathe some of the air which has been breathed by the other, and consequently rendered impure.—Herald of Health.
